Brown Bags & Brief Sessions, Gaye Gibson

Providing a long, luxurious hypnotic session for clients is easy, but not so much when time is limited. Gaye Gibson has found it beneficial to clients and to be able to provide an effective hypnotic session in the space of 1/2 an hour or so. Gaining skill in providing these short but sweet sessions will allow attendees to market themselves to organizations who allow lunch hour sessions to be held on site. Much can be accomplished in a 30 minute session and still allow the client ample time to attend to other responsibilities. Ample time will be provided for attendees to practice and discuss challenges they experience. Learning to work within time restrictions may broaden the potential client base for many practitioners.

Gaye Gibson has a background in nursing, psychology, and spiritual and martial arts. She has been teaching at Randal Churchill's ACHE certified school since 2011. She lives in El Dorado with her husband, enjoys audiobooks and traveling.

Experimentation: Deal with the Unexpected, Sharon Waxkirsh

Gil Boyne, the pioneer of combining psycho-therapeutic methods with hypnosis, developed Transforming Therapy™. Unlike standard hypnotic approaches, it prioritizes dealing with what emerges (DWWE) during initial sessions. Client cues seemingly unrelated to the presenting complaint become the focus, leading to more effective outcomes when applied in the hypnotic state. Through active participation in experimentation with Boynean therapeutic approaches during this workshop one will develop skills that can be applied during client hypnosis. The goal of being better equipped to encounter the unexpected in hospital or dental-practice settings as well as private practice sessions, will be achieved, leading to the attainment of successful outcomes for clients.

Therapeutic Kinesiology, Marla Brucker

Therapeutic Kinesiology (Muscle Testing) is an amazing tool that can read the body's energy system and what's happening at the subconscious level. Muscle Testing (MT) is a precise measure of a neurological response in the body. It is a means of communication, but not the communication itself. MT assists the clinician in seeing what's going on at an unconscious level. Regardless of the modality used, it effectively uncovers essential information for planning a therapeutic strategy. Attendees will also learn a unique technique: Uncovering Core Beliefs, which helps to break down specific mental patterns and habits, getting them to the source of their presenting issue by using Muscle Testing to communicate directly with the subconscious mind. This allows you to "talk to the body" now.

Marla Brucker has been a Clinical Hypnotherapist for over 35 years, an accomplished motivational trainer and seminar leader, conducting international seminars and leadership training programs. Marla is a Registered Hypnotic Anesthesiologist, Master Practitioner of NLP, and certified in Energy Psychology.

Acute & Chronic Pain, Bill Anapoell

Pain can be acute, subacute, or chronic and knowing which technique to use or how best to approach a particular client can be confusing. However, by matching the pain stimulus to the specific area of the neuroanatomy that is being stimulated, we can easily map out a simple technique that will allow you to handle any situation on the spot! I promise not to bore you with hard core science, but I will show you how having a basic knowledge of neuroanatomy will allow you to easily deliver an effective approach regardless of the type of pain your client has.

As a medical doctor, my patients' experiences vary from acute postoperative pain to the chronic discomfort of cancer. I am excited to share the Homunculus Protocol, an approach I have used with thousands of patients to achieve effective pain control.

Reprogramming Self-Sabotage, Patrick Singleton

Self-sabotage may be one of the major reasons people seek hypnotherapy, whether or not they realize it. And even if self-sabotage is not a person's presenting problem, there are few things more disheartening or disappointing than hearing a client talk about their progress with you, only for them to then go on and find a way to sabotage the progress they achieved.

This workshop includes a full on, word for word script, not of suggestions, but instructions to the intelligence of the subconscious to eliminate the various causes of self-sabotage. I'll do a live demo of the process in action, we'll go through the script, and I'll answer questions.

Patrick is the Creator of Inner Mind-Sourcing™ and Creative NLP Solutions™, and has been training people from all over the world since 1997. He's given Trainings since 2012 and maintains a thriving private practice in Santa Fe New Mexico.

Benefits of Multi-Session Projects,

Patricia Reynolds Sørbye

My topic addresses a couple of worries that most hypnotherapists have experienced, though few openly discuss. A concern for both newly certified hypnotherapists and seasoned practitioners is how to keep the client engaged long enough to affect desired change. Therapists often think that clients will not commit to a prescribed number of sessions, and don't think they will pay for the program before they begin. In my 20th year of hypnotherapy practice, I can say that I have always insisted on both and have managed to work together with my client-partners, not only to make the lasting change they want, but also to manifest a substantial professional hypnotherapy practice and career for myself. What I mean to show you will make it seem surprisingly easy.

Patricia Reynolds Sørbye, CCHt, who is happily in the 20th year of her private practice at Watervox Hypnosis & Hypnotherapy in Oakland, California, Instructor at Hypnotherapy Training Institute, Member and past Chair of the Board of Directors of the ACHE.

Embracing the Past, DeAnna Torres

Hypnotherapists have long recognized that age-regression is a powerful modality to release childhood trauma and the resulting distortions to our clients' thoughts about themselves, the world, and their place in it. Decades of research and empirical evidence have more than proven its efficacy when it comes to ending repetition compulsion. But what if the ISE can't be found in this life? What if the story of the Soul is much bigger than one incarnation? What if unhealed traumas that occurred long ago still echo in the psyche, shaping the personality, beliefs, and behaviors of the present life?

Come learn how approaching Past Life Regression with the intention to release trauma can also have dramatic effects on your clients' lives, sometimes in beautifully unexpected ways.

DeAnna Torres had a life-altering, spontaneous past-life experience at age 40. She then studied hypnotherapy with Katherine Zimmerman and Michael Newton, and shamanism with Hank Wesselman. She's been facilitating past life regressions for her clients since 2009.

Emotional connections to habits are deeply ingrained within our psyche. Whether it's the comforting embrace of a daily routine or the automatic response to certain triggers, emotions play a significant role in shaping our habits and behaviors. However, when we begin to shift the emotional connection tied to these actions, a profound transformation can occur.

The key to breaking unhealthy habits lies in reshaping the emotional connection associated with them. By cultivating self-awareness, self-hypnosis, and mindfulness, clients can begin to recognize the underlying emotions driving their behaviors.

Hypnotic Dreamwork™ is about the powerful synergies of Gestalt dreamwork and hypnotherapy, as demonstrated in Randal Churchill's award-winning text, Become the Dream. Dreams are direct messages of the subconscious experience of oneself and the world. Avoiding analysis and interpretation, Gestalt modalities get to the essence of the existential meaning of the dream. Various traditional Gestalt therapy methods are very effective in part because they tend to induce and deepen hypnosis. Gestalt dreamwork and hypnosis can complement each other for profound insights and breakthroughs. Workshop includes: the hypnotic techniques of Gestalt dreamwork; the powerful integration of additional hypnotic methods; how to get effective results with only a dream fragment; how to help your clients attain vivid dream recall. Includes a live Hypnotic Dreamwork demonstration.

Randal Churchill is past ACHE President. He is founder (1978) of the Hypnotherapy Training Institute and author of award-winning texts, Regression Hypnotherapy and Become the Dream, and the acclaimed Catharsis in Regression Hypnotherapy.

Dowsing for Hypnotherapists, Patrick Singleton

Dowsing has existed in various forms and been practiced by many cultures all over the world, all the way back into antiquity. This gives you the ability to avoid going down a path that will not work for a given client, and it lets you know which of your tools are best suited for that person as you're working with them. Bring a pendulum!

Patrick has been teaching NLP and Hypnotherapy to students from all over the world since 1997. He's presented at many conferences in the US, and maintains a thriving private practice in Santa Fe, NM, where he also teaches Inner Mind-Sourcing.
